History

Built in 1927 as the Hotel Alrae, the landmark building became the Hôtel Plaza Athénée, New York in 1984. The hotel has undergone two multi-million dollar refurbishment projects in recent years – the first was completed in 1994, and the second in 2010. The latest refurbishment includes the renovation of the majority of guestrooms and suites, the addition of four premier luxury suites, a new lobby look, a spacious fitness center and business center, and the addition of a new spa. Great care was taken to ensure that the renovations respected the architectural tradition of the 1927 masterpiece, including the restoration of the elegant canvas mural that dominates the hotel's lobby.
