GQ, March 2010

When in New York, [Pierce Brosnan] stays and receives visitors at the very Upper East Side Hôtel Plaza Athénée—has for years, knows the names of every server and busboy working at the lavishly bedraped lobby lounge. Julianne Moore tried to lure him downtown once, to stay someplace a bit more modern and trendy. Brosnan lasted one night in SoHo, and it was back to the marble statues of the Athénée.

“It feels old-money, and I like money,” he says. “I love the finer things in life.”
